NOT LONG AFTER I released Proxima Nova in 2005, I started getting asked: “What serif typeface would you recommend to use with Proxima Nova?” In all the time I’d spent working on it (and its earlier incarnation, Proxima Sans), I had never really thought much about this. But I tried to think of what I would use myself, usually suggesting things like Century Schoolbook, Georgia, or maybe Rockwell. None of these suggestions seemed particularly satisfying to me, so I started thinking about a serif typeface designed to be used with Proxima Nova. ■ The first approach I tried was to do a slab serif version of Proxima Nova. This sort of thing had been done before (e.g., Helvetica → Helse serif, Avant Garde → Lubalin Graph, Univers → Serifa and Glypha), and it didn’t look bad, but it occurred to me that I couldn’t remember ever seeing any of these sans/slab pairs used together, so it felt like the wrong direction. My second approach was to increase the contrast of Proxima Nova and add smaller serifs, sort of along the lines of Candida, a rather obscure thick and thin slab serif face from the sixties. Somehow, it still didn’t seem to be the right answer. Trying to retain the underlying structure of Proxima Nova (i.e., its skeleton) seemed to be constraining me. ■ Finally, in 2020, I had an epiphany. I realized that what I really wanted was a serif typeface that would harmonize with Proxima Nova the way that Morris Fuller Benton’s Century Schoolbook and Century Expanded harmonized

with Franklin Gothic and News Gothic. These faces comprised a sort of ad hoc superfamily, held together by their shared proportions, not the structures of their letterforms. ■ I then remembered a serif typeface idea I’d had in 1979 (working name: “Metropolis”), not long before my earliest concepts for what would become Proxima Nova. Like the proto-Proxima Nova concept, “Metropolis” was a hybrid, combining elements of various popular serif typefaces: Times, Century, Baskerville, Plantin. I also wanted it to have proportions similar to Helvetica—something that was also part of the proto-Proxima Nova concept. It was exactly what I needed. ■ Starting from my 1979 drawings, I adapted “Metropolis” to match the proportions of Proxima Nova, changing some of the details to better harmonize with it, such as flattening the head serifs on the lowercase. This time, it worked. The result was Proxima Sera, not Proxima Nova with serifs, but a companion serif typeface. ■ Proxima Sera comes in nine weights (from Thin to Black) with matching italics. (The Thin style is recommend mainly for large sizes.) It also shares most of the character set and special features of Proxima Nova, such as true small caps, proportional and tabular figures in both lining and old style, fraction support, ordinals, case-sensitive forms, alternate characters, ligatures, and dingbats. Compared to Proxima Nova, its initial release is still missing condensed styles and support for Greek and Cyrillic, but those will come later, as well as a variable version. —Mark Simonson

NOTE: Access to OpenType features requires application and/or operating system OpenType support.

ALTERNATE CHARACTER ACCESS

There are seven Stylistic Sets, providing access to alternate characters in Proxima Sera. These correspond with Proxima Nova where appropriate. In applications that support it, the name of the Stylistic Set is displayed (e.g., “Schoolbook Style”) instead of or in addition to the number:

Set	Name	Roman	Italic
1	Schoolbook Style	a g l y → α g l y	*
2	Simple “a” Style	a → α	*
4	Alternate Roman Lowercase a	a → α	*
5	Alternate Italic Lowercase g	g → g	*
6	Alternate Lowercase l	l → l	*
7	Alternate Lowercase y	y → y	*
8	Straight Quotes to Primes	' " → ' "	' " → ' "

* NO CHANGE

In programs that support Stylistic Sets, more than one Set may be applied at a time. For example, Stylistic Set 1 could be recreated by applying Sets 4, 5, 6, and 7 all at once.

Note that Stylistic Sets 1 through 7 affect roman only. There is no Stylistic Set 3 in Proxima Sera. In Proxima Nova Set 3 is the alternate capital G, which does not exist in Proxima Sera. Stylistic Set 5 in Proxima Sera differs from Set 5 in Proxima Nova, where it activates the alternate italic a. In Proxima Sera it activates the alternate g.

STYLISTIC MAPPING (PLAIN, ITALIC, BOLD, BOLD ITALIC)

In Microsoft Office and other Windows applications, Proxima Sera is broken into smaller “sub-families” that work with the I (italic) and B (bold) buttons on toolbars.

Only the first member of each group appears in the font listing in such applications and is the “plain” style within that group. The others are “italic,” “bold,” and “bold italic” respectively:

GROUP 1: Thin, Thin Italic

GROUP 2: Extralight, Extralight Italic

GROUP 3: Light, Light Italic

GROUP 4: Regular, Italic, Bold, Bold Italic

GROUP 5: Medium, Medium Italic

GROUP 6: Semibold, Semibold Italic

GROUP 7: Extrabold, Extrabold Italic

GROUP 8: Black, Black Italic

For example, to use Proxima Sera Bold Italic, choose Proxima Sera Regular from the font list and then click the I and B buttons on the toolbar (or use the keyboard shortcuts). Note: The “bold” button only works with the Regular style. The “italic” button works with all styles.

Not all applications support stylistic mapping. Use of stylistic mapping is optional and not necessarily recommended for some pre-press workflows.
